conference welcome

Ólafur 'Þ. Harðarson Professor of Political Science and Dean of the School of Social Sciences, University of Iceland

Dear ECPR General Conference participants!

It is my great pleasure to welcome you all to the 6th ECPR General Conference here at the University of Iceland in Reykjavík.

The University of Iceland was founded in 1911. This conference – the biggest conference ever held in Iceland – is an important part of our centennial celebrations.

This year, Icelanders are also celebrating the 200th anniversary of their national hero, Jón Sigurðsson – whose statue is placed in front of the Althingi building in Austurvöllur. Jón Sigurðsson (1811-1879) was the leader of the Icelandic independence movement in the 19th Century. Besides being a parliamentarian, he was an outstanding scholar who lived most of his life in Copenhagen. The Icelandic "independence struggle" – as we like to call it – was fought without any violence: the main weapons were historical and legal arguments (sometimes quite complex), developed by Jón Sigurðsson. Gradually Danish authorities accepted all Icelandic demands. In 1845, the old Althingi – founded in 930 – was re-established as a consultative assembly to the King. Althingi became a proper legislative body in 1874, when a new Constitution granted it legislative and financial powers. Icelanders became largely independent in domestic affairs with Home Rule in 1904, when parliamentarianism was introduced with an Icelandic minister and administration in Reykjavík. Iceland became a sovereign state in 1918, and a republic in 1944.

For centuries, the Icelandic elite attended the University of Copenhagen for higher education. In the 19th Century, the establishment of an Icelandic university was increasingly seen as an integral part of the independence process.

When the University of Iceland was founded on June 17th 1911 – the 100th birthday of Jón Sigurðsson – only 45 students (including one woman) were enrolled, mostly in the fields of theology, medicine, and law. Today it is a modern research university, offering most academic disciplines to 14,000 students (a majority of which are women). Over 5,000 of those students attend the School of Social Sciences which consists of six faculties: Business Administration, Economics, Law, Political Science, Social and Human Sciences, and Social Work.

Political science was introduced at the University of Iceland in 1970. The first professor was Ólafur Ragnar Grímsson – now the President of Iceland. He will be giving the plenary lecture at this conference. That event will take place in the brand new Reykjavík Concert Hall, Harpa.

I would like to thank all those who made this conference possible; the organisers here in Reykjavík, the ECPR staff in Colchester – and you, the participants.

I hope the 6th ECPR General Conference will be intellectually stimulating – and that your stay in Iceland will be something to remember.

the university of iceland and research is the foundation of a thriving modern society, based on the idea of a dynamic economy, democracy, equal rights and the general welfare of its citizens. The duty of the University of Iceland to Icelandic society and to the international community is to educate responsible young people who are capable of taking an active part in the remaking of our own society and the global community and meeting new and challenging tasks of the 21st Century.

The University of Iceland was established on 17 June 1911 by Althingi – the Icelandic Parliament and is therefore celebrating it centennial this year. The first year 45 students enrolled and the lectures were in the parliament building. The current student population of the university is around 14,000. This includes around 1,100 foreign students, who come as exchange students at undergraduate or masters level, and increasingly for doctoral degrees in many different fields

A modern, diversified and rapidly developed institution, the University of Iceland offers opportunites for study and research in almost 400 programmes spanning most fields of science and scholarship: Social Sciences, Health Sciences, Humanities, Education, Natural Sciences and Engineering.

Some of the resources available at the University are uniquely Icelandic. These include the old Icelandic manuscripts preserved in the Árni Magnússon Institute, Icelandic census records dating from 1703, exceptionally complete genealogical data and climatological, glaciological, seismic and geothermal records. The university also holds a leading role in sustainable energy and environmental research.

In order to best serve Icelandic society the University of Iceland has set itself the goal of becoming one of the leading universities in the world. The university will work toward that target by strengthening research, teaching and support services. This goal was set in 2006 and the university has already reached some landmarks, for example the number of doctoral students is ever-increasing, external income has grown and the university has undergone an extensive governance restructuring.

The University of Iceland is the strongest cornerstone of knowledge creation in Icelandic society. In a time of growing international competition university education and research activities in Iceland must be fully in line with the best available internationally; the University of Iceland plays a key role in this regard.

The lesson to be drawn from the 100 year history of the University of Iceland is that investment in higher education

tourist information

The destination: Reykjavík / Iceland

Since way back when, man has sought inspiration and new experiences from unfamiliar locations. Travel has become a large part of the quality of life for people all over the world. Travel provides inspiration and quite often a new perspective on daily activities, whether related to work or private life.

Some places just naturally stimulate people's imagination and give them greater energy at the same time.

Iceland is just such a place: inspiring and refreshing

Iceland is not only closer than you think, but far different than you ever imagined. Where else can you witness such marvels of Mother Nature as a tremendous icecap and several glaciers, spouting geysers and steaming solfataras, volcanoes (hopefully dormant), raging rivers and magnificent waterfalls, a multitude of birds, cavorting whales just offshore, and many other surprises?

Summers are surprisingly warm and winters not as cold as you might expect should you visit during the off-season. Regardless of when you visit, be assured that the warmth shown by Icelanders, their desire to share their culture, and the efforts made to make your stay as pleasant as possible will, like the spectacular landscape, never be forgotten.

Reykjavík – Iceland's capital – is a young and daring city characterised by strong contrasts. Conveniently small, clean and safe, it is essentially free of the major problems that haunt most other capitals. Visitors to Reykjavík cannot escape experiencing the vibrant energy at the heart of Iceland's capital city. Whether you want to feel the boiling thermal energy underground, get close to the natural green energy within the city and around it, or experience its lively culture and fun filled nightlife, you should be in for a very memorable visit.

The perfect way to experience Reykjavik's healing energy is to visit one of its many thermal pools and luxury spas. A healthy swim, a soak in the thermal hot spots or a relaxing visit to a state-of-the-art spa leaves you feeling in tune with body and soul. The world-famous Blue Lagoon is just a forty-minute drive from the capital. Reykjavik's abundant supply of geothermal water is even used to heat its Atlantic Ocean coast, creating a warm inlet by a sandy beach just ten minutes from the old city centre.

Iceland in general

The Vikings settled in Iceland, in the ninth Century. They established a unique republic in AD 930 at whose heart was the Althingi, now the oldest functioning parliament in the world. Freedom and respect for the individual are still the guiding values in Iceland more than a thousand years later. Iceland is perfectly located, only 2-3 hours away by air from continental Europe and 5 hours away from the East coast of the United States. Iceland is the second largest island in Europe and the third largest in the Atlantic Ocean. In environmental terms, Iceland is unique. It is a large country (103,000 km², about the same surface area as Ireland or the State of Virginia), but is sparsely populated, with only 3 persons per km² living mostly along the coast. The interior of the country contains stunning contrasts. It is largely an arctic desert, punctuated with mountains, glaciers, volcanoes and waterfalls. Most of the vegetation and agricultural areas are in the lowlands close to the coastline.

Climate

Iceland has a relatively mild coastal climate. The average summer temperature in Reykjavik, the capital, is 10. 6°C/51°F in July, with average highs of 24.3°C/76°F. The average winter temperature in Reykjavik is similar to New York City's, about 0°C/32°F in January (average highs are 9. 9°C/50°C). Usually the weather is very changeable.

The mild climate stems from the Gulf Stream and attendant warm ocean currents from the Gulf of Mexico. The weather is also affected by the East Greenland polar current curving south-eastwards round the north and east coasts. For two to three months in summer there is continuous daylight in Iceland, and early spring and late autumn enjoy long twilight. However, the days are very short in mid-winter. In general there is a cool summer with about 5-25 °C in July and mild winters with on average -2,3 °C on average in January. The weather is rather unstable and visitors can expect all kinds of weather which makes a visit to the country even more exiting.

History and People

The first permanent settlers in Iceland were Norsemen from Scandinavia, arriving in the late 9th Century, and Celts from the British Isles. The language of Iceland was Old Norse from the outset, but there are traces of Celtic influence in some of the Edda poems, in personal and place names and even in the appearance of present-day Icelanders.

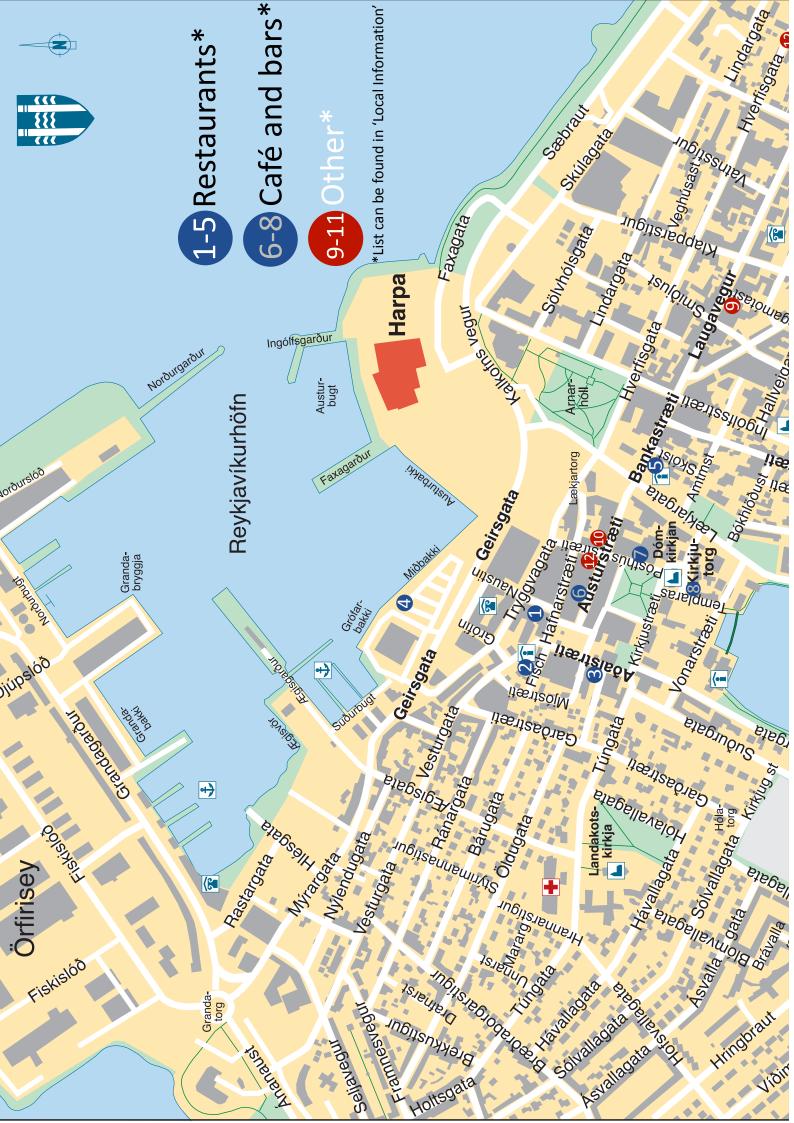

Language

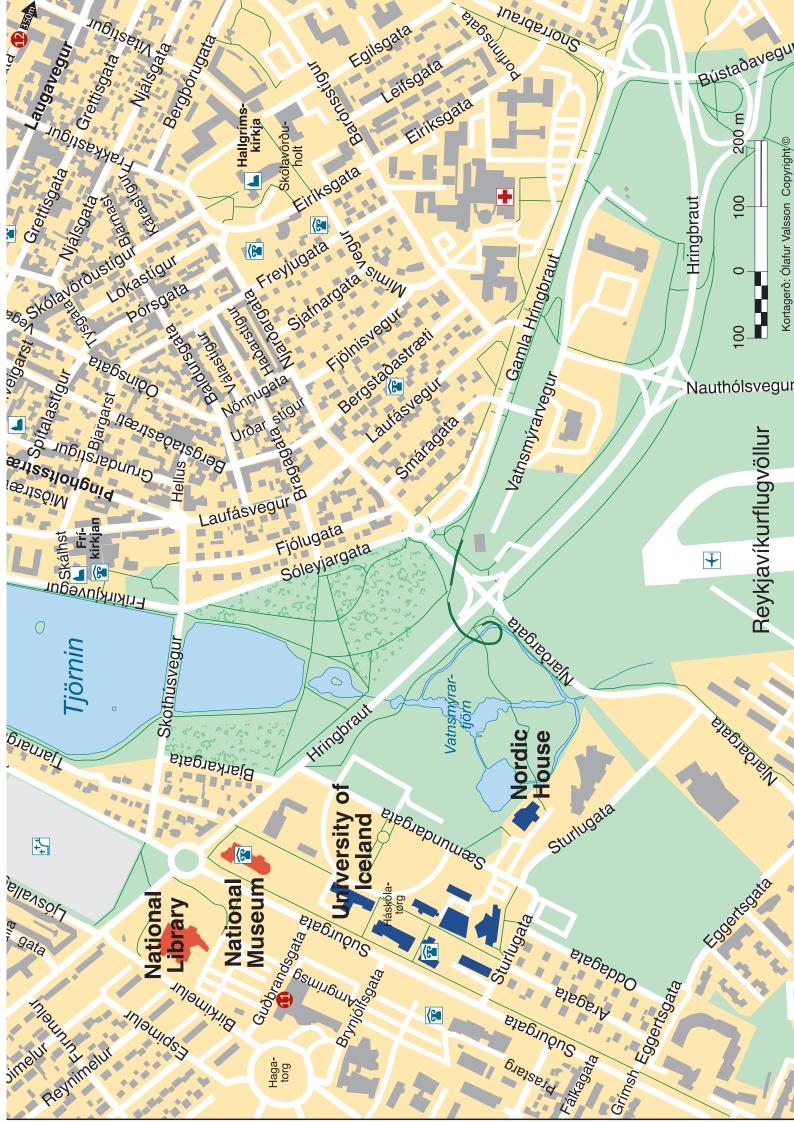

Icelandic, the national language, has changed very little from the original tongue spoken by the Norse settlers. Icelandic has two letters of its own, P/p and D/d, which were used in old English. "P" is pronounced as "th" in "thing" and "D" is pronounced as the "th" in "them". A large percentage of English words derive from Icelandic. English and Danish are widely spoken and understood in Iceland.

Parliament

Established in 930, Althingi is the oldest functioning parliament in the world, with 63 members elected for a term of four years by a popular vote. With the exception of the President and the judges of the Supreme Court, anyone who is eligible to vote can stand for a parliamentary seat. There is universal suffrage for all citizens 18 years or older.

plenary lecture

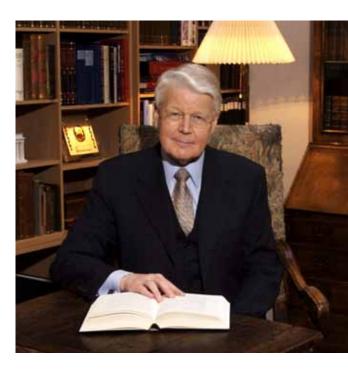

can political science keep up with the 21st century?

Ólafur Ragnar Grímsson President of Iceland

Thursday 25 August, 1800-1840 at Harpa Convention Centre

Ólafur Ragnar Grímsson is the fifth president of the Republic of Iceland, currently serving his fourth term. President Grímsson earned his BA degree in economics and political science at the University of Manchester, England, in 1965 where he also completed his PhD thesis in political science five years later. He subsequently became the first professor of political science at the University of Iceland. He first took a seat in Althingi, the legislative assembly, in 1978 and served as Iceland's Minister of Finance 1988-1991.

During his Presidency he has emphasised sustainable management of natural resources to control climate change, brought the lessons of Iceland's clean energy achievements to many parts of the world, countries in Asia, Africa and Europe and to the United States, strongly advocating the use of geothermal energy as a renewable, economically viable, and reliable resource. He has actively supported training and research on desertification control, soil use and carbon sequestration, creating joint projects by scientists from different countries. He was among the initiators of a Global Roundtable on Climate Change that brought together representatives of nearly 100 European and American corporations, as well as experts, scientists, and opinion leaders. In recent years, President Grimsson has drawn attention to the problems which accelerating melting of the Himalayan glaciers would cause in the region, encouraging scientists to deepen their understanding of these developments.

In addition to his leadership role in environmental issues, President Grímsson also has been a strong advocate for Arctic issues and initiated the Northern Research Forum which has held assemblies of scientists, scholars, public officials and political leaders from the five Nordic countries, Russia, Canada and the US. He served in 1982-1984 as the chair of the organisation committee for the Council of Europe conference, "North-South: Europe's Role". As president of the international association of Parliamentarians for Global Action (PGA) from 1984 to 1990 and as a board member to 1996 he worked on many international issues dealing with arms control, peace and economic development. Under his leadership, the association organised the Peace Initiative of Six Heads of States, dedicated to nuclear disarmament.

President Grímsson was for several years a board member of the Special Olympics and played a major role in the international drug prevention campaign, Youth in Europe, which now enjoys the participation of 19 European cities. He has also been active in promoting cooperation between Icelandic and foreign universities and has lectured at universities in many countries in Europe, China, Canada and in America Harvard, Columbia, Brown, and the Ohio State University, where he received a special honour this year as a Doctor of Public Service.

Among many international awards he has received is the Indira Gandhi Peace Prize, which he received on behalf of the PGA, and the Jawaharlal Nehru Award for International Understanding.

small states and the global economic crisis

Friday 26 August 2011, 1300-1440/ location: Room 105 - University Square

Our panel of discussants will examine how small states in Europe have responded to the global economic crisis. In the doing, the panelists have been asked to organise their responses around two questions. First, we ask if size is more relevant than other factors for understanding how states are affected by, and respond to, the global economic crisis. Then we ponder whether EU and/or Euro membership matter (either in terms of exposing/protecting small states to the crisis, or in terms of limiting/facilitating responses to that crisis). In the short presentations and in the discussion that follows we hope to draw on a wide variety of small state experiences to see whether any lessons can be learned for all states, whether they are big or small.

What do Fukuyama and Chomsky think?

Find answers in 17 interviews with America's leading political thinkers. Renowned experts such as Zbigniew Brzezinski, Francis Fukuyama, and Noam Chomsky discuss the nation's foreign policy in the post-9/11 world. Yet, they also comment on their own role in US society – and the mounting challenges they face today.
