Dear Colleagues

Welcome to Oslo, welcome to the University of Oslo!

It is an honour to host the 11th ECPR General Conference, and a pleasure to share the academic and social programme with you. We hope you will enjoy the conference, and the city of Oslo. We will in particular emphasise the plenary session and the Roundtables, for which we – as local organisers – are responsible.

The Plenary Lecture by Johan P. Olsen on Democratic Accountability and the Changing European Political Order will address ongoing transformations of welfare states? How can we expect the future of the European political science? What will be the future of the European welfare states? How can we expect gender (in)equality to develop in the future? The issues for the Plenary Lecture and the Roundtables are described in more detail elsewhere in this programme.

Celebrating our 60th anniversary this year, the Department of Political Science was founded in 1957 and conducts research and teaching in all areas of political science. The department currently has about 80 members of staff, and about 1,200 programme students at all levels. The Faculty of Social Sciences comprises five departments and several research centres. Two of these are ARENA – Centre for European Studies and C-REX – Center for Research on Extremism. The faculty organises the Oslo Summer School in Comparative Social Science Studies, which provides several PhD research courses that aim to cover all academic disciplines in the social sciences. Each year, around 200 students from European countries and elsewhere participate in the courses. We wish you a successful conference and a wonderful stay in Oslo.

The lecture will take place in the University ceremonial hall, the Aula. The Aula is the university’s most famous building, decorated with 11 large oil paintings by Edvard Munch, which are the only decorations by Munch that can still be viewed in their original context. Following the Plenary Lecture, we will walk to the spectacular Oslo Opera House for the opening reception. The building is situated at the head of the Oslofjord, centrally in the city. The Opera House, which was completed in 2007, won the culture award at the World Architecture Festival in Barcelona in 2008 and the 2009 European Union Prize for Contemporary Architecture. The two Roundtables hosted by our Department of Political Science take up crucial issues for Europe and for European political science. What will be the future of the European welfare states? How can we expect gender (in)equality to develop in the future? The issues for the Plenary Lecture and the Roundtables are described in more detail elsewhere in this programme.

Dear colleague

On behalf of the ECPR, we would like to welcome you to its 11th General Conference, which this year features 72 Sections, 450 Panels and almost 2,000 Papers. The varied programme includes Roundtables, Receptions, Featured Panels, and a Plenary Lecture by eminent scholar Johan P. Olsen on Democratic Accountability and the Changing European Political Order.

The General Conference, now held annually, has established itself as the largest regular event for European political science, with more than 2,000 participants and steadily growing submissions for Sections, Panels and Papers. Calls for next year’s conference, at the University of Hamburg, go out on 15 September. We are very grateful to all those involved in the organisation of this event. Our special thanks go to the Section Chairs, the local organisers, and to ECPR Central Services. We wish you all a great conference!

Klaus Goetz

Members of the ECPR Executive Committee

Klaus Goetz’s work focuses on comparative politics and public policy, with a special interest in the analysis of political time. He is currently engaged in two major research projects, both funded by the German Research Foundation, that examine budgeting in international organisations and resource mobilisation for international refugee policy, respectively. He recently co-edited (with Ronny Paz) a special issue of the journal Global Policy on ‘Resourcing International Organisations’.

He was local organiser of the 2009 ECPR General Conference in Potsdam and has been co-editor of the journal West European Politics (Taylor & Francis) since 2000.

Maurizio Carbone’s research is related mainly to EU external relations, particularly foreign aid and other development-related policies. He is also interested in European integration, international development, and Italy’s role in the international arena. He was local organiser of the 2014 ECPR General Conference in Glasgow and is a founding editor of the journal Contemporary Italian Politics (Taylor & Francis).

Klaus Goetz (above) holds the Chair in Political Systems and European Integration at the University of Munich. He previously taught at LSE and at the University of Potsdam. He has held Visiting Professorships at Humboldt University Berlin, the University of Tokyo, the Institute of Advanced Studies Vienna, Hebrew University Jerusalem, and Sciences Po Bordeaux, and he was a Fernand Braudel Fellow at the EUI.

Maurizio Carbone (right) is Professor of International Relations & Development and Jean Monnet Professor of EU External Policies at the University of Glasgow. He has taught previously at the University of Pittsburgh, Carnegie Mellon University, Duke University, Johns Hopkins Bologna, University of Rome Tor Vergata, and has held official visiting research positions at the Université Libre de Bruxelles, University of Canterbury in New Zealand, European University Institute, University of Cambridge, Sciences Po Paris, University of Cologne, and University of Bologna. Out and about in the city

Norway’s capital is transforming into a cosmopolitan hub with an abundance of museums and restaurants, while maintaining the relaxed atmosphere of a much smaller town.

Oslo is one of Europe’s fastest-growing cities, with a population approaching 700,000 and new neighbourhoods boasting eye-catching architecture. The city is nestled between the Oslofjord and hundreds of square miles of forested hills, and is a green city in more ways than one. The compact city centre is easily explored on foot or by bike, and an efficient public transport system makes the whole city accessible without a car.

Norway’s capital since 1814, Oslo is home to the Norwegian government and the Royal Family. The country’s largest cultural institutions, which include the Norwegian Opera & Ballet, the National Theatre and the National Museum of Art, Architecture and Design, present first-rate art exhibitions and opera, ballet and theatre performances.

Other top attractions include the Munch Museum, Holmenkollen Ski Jump, and Vigeland Sculpture Park.

The city’s 1,000-year evolution is on display along the waterfront, where historical sites like Medieval Park and Akershus Fortress neighbour the contemporary architectural marvels of Tjuvholmen and Bjørvika.

The University of Oslo

Founded in 1811, the University of Oslo is Norway’s oldest institution of higher education, and is highest ranked in the country for both education and research.

Today only the Faculty of Law remains in the old university buildings on Oslo’s main street, Karl Johan. The main campus, Blindern, with its interesting modern architecture surrounded by parkland, lies a few kilometres outside the city centre.

A leading European university

The University of Oslo is ranked 58th in the world and 18th in Europe in the 2015 Shanghai World Ranking. With five Nobel Prize winners, UiO has a strong track record of pioneering research and scientific discovery.

The University has almost 28,000 students enrolled in degree programmes across eight faculties: Theology, Law, Medicine, Humanities, Mathematics and Natural Sciences, Dentistry, Social Sciences, and Education.

UiO coordinates ten National Centres of Excellence, a Centre for Research-based Innovation, seven Marie Curie Training Sites and museums such as the Viking Ship Museum and the Botanical Garden.

A globally engaged university

UiO offers more than 800 courses taught in English, and more than 50 Master’s programmes taught entirely in English. At UiO you will meet students and researchers from all over the world – 22 per cent of the academic staff and 31 per cent of our PhD candidates are from abroad.

UiO aims to make a significant contribution to the knowledge base needed to address today’s major global challenges, through strategic interdisciplinary research initiatives such as UiO:Life Science, UiO:Energy and UiO:Global Challenges – Nordic Experiences.

The European Consortium for Political Research

An independent scholarly association that supports the training, research and cross-national co-operation of political scientists

Events
Each year, the ECPR organises the Joint Sessions of Workshops, Summer and Winter Schools in Methods and Techniques, and the General Conference. A Graduate Student Conference has been held in even years, until 2016.

Publishing
We have our own imprint, ECPR Press, publishing high-quality Monographs and collections of Essays, along with a small selection of out-of-print Classics that have made a significant contribution to political studies scholarship. Our imprint also includes a highly respected series of multi-authored edited volumes, Studies in European Political Science, many of which have developed from workshops at the ECPR’s Joint Sessions and Research Sessions.

ECPR also co-publishes three leading journals: European Political Science with Palgrave Macmillan, European Journal of Political Research with Wiley-Blackwell and European Political Science Review with Cambridge University Press. We also publish the high-profile book series Comparative Politics with Oxford University Press.

Standing Groups and Research Networks
These are groups of researchers, in many cases formed at ECPR events, with a shared scholarly interest. Some are small, maintaining only a website and mailing list; some organise major conferences and summer schools, and produce their own publications. There are currently over 50 Standing Groups, covering many sub-fields of the discipline. All are eligible to apply for grants to help with the running of summer schools and organisation of other major activities.

Prizes
Each year, the ECPR marks its members’ achievements by awarding a number of prizes. These prizes cover the spectrum of a scholar’s career, from the Jean Blondel PhD Prize to the Lifetime Achievement Award.

Membership
ECPR membership is institutional and currently comprises some 340 universities concerned with the teaching and research of political science.

While membership is paid by the university, it is the individuals within it who receive the benefits from Master’s and PhD students, through to the most senior professor.

MyECPR housekeeping: help us help you!
Please keep your institution and email address up to date. That way, we don’t waste members’ money trying to contact dormant accounts, and you won’t miss out on early-bird bargains. Clean data also means our communications can be streamlined and better targeted to your needs. Did you know that you can use the Research Interests field under My Profile to let us know your particular areas of study? This data helps us improve the accuracy and relevance of keyword indexes.

Might you have more than one historical MyECPR account associated with an email address you no longer use? (Don’t be shy; it’s quite common.) Contact support@ecpr.eu to let us know, and we can merge the data in this account with your live one, no problem.
ECPR governance

ECPR Director

In September 2013, Martin Bull (University of Salford) was appointed as the ECPR’s first Director. Martin oversees the running of the Central Services, directs ECPR operations, and advises and assists the EC with the organisation’s strategic direction. He has considerable experience in ECPR matters, having served as its Academic Director 2006 – 2013, and on its Executive Committee 2003 – 2006.

ECPR Chair

The Chair is elected by the Executive Committee every three years coinciding with the changeover between Committees, and as such they serve a three-year term. The current Chair is Rudy Andeweg (Universiteit Leiden) who will serve until April 2018. The Chair takes the lead in the strategic direction of the organisation and works closely with the Vice Chair and Treasurer, as well as chairing meetings of the Executive Committee.

In recognition of the need to have a Chair experienced in ECPR business, in the preceding autumn the outgoing EC elects a Chair Designate from those members who have another three years to serve.

The ECPR’s Executive Committee (EC) is a Board of twelve Trustees, elected by the Council of Official Representatives. The EC, which meets twice a year, is responsible for the day-to-day running of the ECPR, as well as its long-term strategic development. To make this task more manageable, members are grouped into five portfolios covering the spectrum of ECPR’s work. Drawn from ECPR Full-Member institutions, EC members are elected for a six-year term, staggered so that six members are elected every three years.

To find out more about the current EC, go to www.ecpr.eu and click the ‘Executive Committee’ link at the bottom of the page.
ECPR Council

ECPR Council Meeting

Date: Friday 8 September

Time: 18:00 – 19:00

Venue: Eilert Sundts hus, AUD 7

The ECPR Council is comprised of one Official Representative from each member institution. Council performs a number of functions, including electing the ECPR’s Executive Committee (EC) every three years, receiving annual reports from the EC and voting on elements of constitutional reform.

Council meets once a year, at the General Conference, and as such will meet this year in Oslo on Friday between 18:00 and 19:00.

Speaker of Council

The Speaker of Council holds a number of responsibilities including chairing Council meetings; proposing amendments to the Standing Orders of Council; liaising with the Executive Committee over business matters and the formulation of the agenda of Council meetings; serving as Senior Returning Officer for Executive Committee elections and votes on amending the ECPR Constitution; being a general liaison point for members of Council residing in the ECPR. David Farrell, MRJA, holds the Chair of Politics at University College Dublin.

Getting around the city

Oslo public transport is run by Ruter AS. Use Ruter tickets on metro, trams, buses and ferries, and on NSB trains in Oslo and Akershus. More information, including ticket prices and maps, at https://ruter.no/en

Alternatively, search for ‘RuterReise’ (journeys) or ‘RuterBillen’ (tickets) in the App Store or on Google Play.

Tickets and travelcards

You cannot buy on-board tickets, so remember to buy before boarding.

Travelcards are plastic cards you top up with tickets or credit. Validate using a card reader. Order at https://ruter.no/en or via the app, or buy from staffed sales outlets. A new travelcard costs NOK 50. With a travelcard, you can buy all Ruter's tickets and top up your pay-as-you-go credit at ticket machines.

City bikes / Oslo Bysykkel

These are used for short rides and as a supplement to public transport. They are available from over 100 bike stations in and around the city centre, between 06:00 and midnight every day. A one-day pass costs NOK 49; a three-day pass NOK 99.

To find out how the scheme works, go to https://oslobysykkel.no or search for ‘Oslo Bysykkel’ in the App Store or on Google Play.

Use the app to find the closest available bike. Tap unlock when you're near a station, and it will tell you which bike is yours. Ride for up to 45 minutes, and extend the rental for an extra 15 minutes – the app lets you know how long you have left.

You can return your bike to any station at any time. The closest available locks show in the app. Place the nose of the bike in the lock. Wait a bit before you pull on the handlebars to make sure it has locked.

Look for confirmation in the app.

By Metro

Take lines 4 or 5, direction Vestli, Sognsvann and Ringen. Alight at either Forskningsparken, five minutes from Eikert Sundhs bus where you registered, or Universitetet Blindern, which is an eight-minute walk away.

By tram

Take tram 17 or tram 18, direction Rikshospitalet. Alight at tram stop Universitetet Blindern, very near the Faculty of Social Sciences (Eikert Sundhs bus), where registration is taking place.

Lifetime Achievement Award

The 2017 Award goes to Joni Lovenduski, Anniversary Professor of Politics at Birkbeck, University of London. Joni has taught at universities across Europe and the US. She has won the UK PSAs Isaiah Berlin Prize, and is a Fellow of the British Academy and Academician of the Academy of Social Sciences. She is a founder of our Standing Group on Gender and Politics, and was a member of the ECPR’s Executive Committee, 1997–2003. Joni is a figurehead of gender and politics study in Europe. She is a source of inspiration and support to many younger female scholars.

Our jury’s verdict

‘We recognise Joni’s crucial role in defining and developing gender and politics in political science. She has done so through her many important publications, but also by founding and strengthening organisations, and by representing gender and politics in the wider community. Spanning more than thirty years, her pioneering research on the political representation of women, the selection of female candidates for elected office and the roles of women in political parties, has contributed new data and advanced new theoretical approaches, challenging the gender-blind assumptions of contemporary political science. Her research has reached beyond the academy, influencing the recruitment strategies of political parties and highlighting the role of, and challenges facing, women in politics.’

Mattei Dogan Prize

The $5,000 prize is awarded biennially to a scholar who has made an outstanding contribution to European political science.

The Mattei Dogan Foundation Prize in European Political Sociology is awarded biennially for a major contribution to the advancement of political sociology.

The 2017 Award goes to Hanspeter Kriesi, who since 2012 has been Stein Rokkan Chair at European University Institute, Florence. He gained his PhD in Sociology from the University of Zurich in 1976 and became professor of collective political behaviour at the University of Amsterdam in 1984, before being appointed full professor at the University of Geneva in 1988. In 2002, Hanspeter Kriesi took up the chair in comparative politics at the University of Zurich.

Our jury’s verdict

‘Hanspeter Kriesi helped redefine and relaunch the field of political sociology. His research ranges across social movements, corporatism, direct democracy, elections, populism, and the political consequences of economic crises. His study of a dramatically evolving society has energised a number of research areas with contributions on the challenges – such as immigration, Euroscepticism, and globalisation – facing European society today. In awarding this prize, we recognise his prolific and much-cited academic output, the quality of his theoretical and empirical contributions over several decades, his leadership and collaborative engagement with senior and junior scholars alike.’

EPS Prize

This £500 prize, generously supported by publishers Palgrave, is awarded to the author of an article in the journal European Political Science which contributes to the understanding of new trends in political science, or offers an innovative approach to teaching and learning in the discipline. All EPS articles except reviews and keynotes are eligible for consideration.

The 2017 prize goes to Ariella Huff, University of Amsterdam, for her article ‘Pouliot’s book provides a critical engagement with contemporary diplomacy in the context of inequality in international political life. Using social theories, it reveals the hierarchical structuring and social practices that pervade multilateral diplomacy. In his empirical analysis of the politics of diplomacy in NATO and the UN, Pouliot shows that international pecking orders are complex social forms that the anarchy principle may not fully capture. His work opens up a new research agenda for the scholarly community.’

Our jury’s verdict

‘First, the authors ask: To what extent does domestic decision making in EU states take the existence of the EU directly into account? Their reasoning is a benchmark against which future situations can be compared. Second, the article summarises recent research about the mainstreaming of the EU after Lisbon. Finally, the piece explicitly considers the prospects of a future research agenda in this area. For these reasons, this article clearly contributes to our understanding of new and innovative trends in political science.’

The Future of the European Welfare States

European welfare states have been remarkably flexible in adjusting to their changing environments. Their core social arrangements remain so popular that any attempt at radical overhaul continues to meet public resistance. However, under increasing stress, especially in the wake of budget deficits and pressure from financial markets, it is not evident that core social programmes can still be protected through reform; they may become victims of distributional battles or policy drift. Severe budgetary problems, the unpredictable but threatening responses of financial markets and the economic consequences of the financial crisis not only pressure for further reform, but possibly undermine the political capacity to implement those reforms needed to guarantee the continued protection of people against social risks that the welfare state has so far offered.

The outcome of these struggles will determine who carries the burden of financial and economic recovery. The crucial political choice seems to lie between a balanced budget and continuing social spending. This ushered in a period of austerity that has cost development spending and public debt, which had to be battled by a severe politics of austerity.

As a result, the political conviction seems to have become that the costly initial response to the crisis and the recession was not sustainable in the long run because it was causing deficit spending to rise dramatically.

This ushered in a period of austerity that aimed to balance budgets and contain public debt. Governments realised, or were reminded by the financial markets, that deficit spending had reached its limits. Consequently, the politics of reform revolved increasingly around who was to pay for what, when and how.

The outcome of these struggles will determine who carries the burden of financial and economic recovery. The crucial political choice seems to lie between a balanced budget and continuing social spending.

The Consequences of the Internationalisation of Political Science Education

Today, many students seek undergraduate and/or graduate education in political science outside the confines of their countries. Academic staff are increasingly hired internationally, and the opportunities for academics to immerse themselves in the cultures of political science departments abroad have multiplied. Universities promote staff and student exchange schemes, and many American universities offer study abroad programmes for their students or dual degree programmes with universities from other countries. In Europe, the European Higher Education Area (EHEA) was established to facilitate the competitiveness of European universities by creating a comparable, compatible system that made it easier for students to study abroad.

The Erasmus programme has encouraged shorter-term exchanges, not only for faculty members but also for administrative staff. Joint degree programmes under the Erasmus Mundus scheme make it inevitable that students study abroad. Strategic partnership agreements seek to encourage the exchange of ideas and research between faculty members of partner institutions. Many American and European universities open campuses in countries such as China, Dubai, Malaysia, Mauritius, Hungary and Uzbekistan. However, such efforts at internationalisation are not limited to the transatlantic area.

The Chinese state – still the major actor in the internationalisation of higher education, directly or through its state universities – has funded international experience for its students and faculty, and offered academic positions to citizens returning home to doctors, trained in the West. Affluent Chinese parents aspire to send their children abroad to earn their degrees, and universities in some countries, including Brazil and Denmark, have looked to hire foreign scholars.

Despite the grand ideas that motivate internationalisation, and the exchange of personnel, results appear mixed. Some educational systems resist what they see as foreign intrusion. Others create barriers inadvertently when, for example, administrative staff refuse to work in English (which has dominated academic discourse), because not written in their contracts or not offered enough courses for foreign students.

This Roundtable will discuss the consequences of internationalisation. Does the meaning of political science and the way research is pursued change? What does this process mean for political science teaching? Does it encourage innovation, or just create difficulties in terms of teaching methods and the curriculum? Finally, how does this process influence research and publishing trends?
Equality in Recession? Transnational Developments

This Roundtable takes stock of contradictory tendencies in gender+ equality norm and policy development in crisis times. First, the Roundtable engages with core meanings of equality; how differences formally recognised in strands policies intersect and are woven into complex claim making.

Second, it will assess research insights from international relations and comparative politics, engaging with literature on transnational politics, norm diffusion, and social movements (Phillip Ayoub). It will look in particular at how transnational mobilisation of marginalised peoples and international channels of visibility influence socio-legal change across states.

Third, it explores patterns of resistance and backlash to gender+ equality, focusing on negative reactions to increased diversity among elected representatives in Europe and beyond (Mona Lena Krook). Is violence and harassment against diversity politicians on the rise? What are its motivations and what forms does it take? And what are the implications for democracy when the political presence of different groups is undermined?

Fourth, the Roundtable asks how opposition to gender equality can be mapped, analysed and theorised (Mieke Verloo). What is the range of oppositional forms in Europe today and how do ‘European’ forms connect globally? How are different forms of opposition normatively evaluated by equality researchers?

It will thus ask: How might analysis interweave with agency? And how should – could – researchers offer public advice on dealing with opposition to gender equality?

Democratic Representation in Interconnected Settings

The standard notion of representation presupposes a demos which selects and authorises representatives to decide on its behalf, demands they account for these decisions, and can punish them for unsatisfactory delivery. It is understood that only the members of the demos are entitled to participate – directly or indirectly – in this decision-making process, while all other subjects remain more or less decision-takers. The accountability of representatives is therefore owed only to these citizens, other subjects being protected by the rule of law, eventual bilateral agreements and a general duty of reciprocity owed to members of the human community.

In highly interconnected settings such as the European Union, however, this model of democratic representation fails, for several reasons.

First, the amount of joint legislation produced through (qualified) majority procedures is extensive, thus disrupting the domestic representation-accountability chains (Scharpf 2009). Second, the Treaties enjoin ‘loyal cooperation’ among member-states and create expectations of cooperative and trustworthy behaviour on the part of national authorities. National representatives – in EU institutions and in national ones – must therefore balance responsiveness towards their own constituencies with responsibility vis-à-vis other national constituencies, an uneasy predicament particularly in times of crisis (Mair 2013).

Third, an extensive jurisprudential interpretation of the four liberties enshrined by the Treaties and the turn to intergovernmentalism during the Euro-crisis have constitutionalised a hyper-liberal polity whose founding principles have never been the object of collective deliberation, creating the conditions for potential domination (Bobman 2007). Fourth, in a European Union which enshrines the freedom of movement of its citizens and aspires to a regime of open borders, the number of denizens and temporary workers is very high and growing, creating evident inequalities in the way EU citizens can exert their political rights in times of crisis (Mair 2013). These developments create a sense of sovereignty loss and a yearning for ‘gaining back control’. They also call for new ways of organising decision-making, of including disenfranchised subjects, of fully factoring the externalities caused to others in domestic decision-making processes, of defining the representative mandate, of conforming representation and deliberation, and of conceptualizing the demos.

This Roundtable addresses these issues from a variety of standpoints, theoretical and empirical, in the hope of teasing out common threads and moving closer to a new definition of democratic representation for the currently highly interconnected context of political organisation.

Donald Trump's surprise victory in the US presidential election, along with the unexpected approval from Brexit and resurgent far right movements in Europe, have brought to the fore pressing questions about the role of political science and how it relates to politics and policymaking. What is the future of academic freedom? What will the relationship between political scientists and government be, and how will that vary around the world? Will there be effects on collaboration among political scientists across the globe?

Should, and how should, these developments affect political science research agendas? How can political scientists best address questions of democracy, populism, and economic distribution? What is the discipline's role in engaging policymakers and the public on these issues?

This Panel will address these questions, and will explore what such developments mean for political science, in terms of the challenges they introduce, and their implications for future research agendas.

On 23 June 2016, 52% of the British electorate voted in favour of leaving the EU. In March 2017, Prime Minister Theresa May invoked Article 50 of the Treaty of the European Union, which started the formal procedure for withdrawal. What kind of Brexit will we have: hard or soft?

How will the relations between Great Britain and the EU look after Britain has left?

Who will suffer, and who will benefit from Brexit?

Will Brexit be the beginning of the end of the European Union?

Among others, these questions will be discussed.

For a Better Tomorrow? Social Enterprises in Different Welfare States under Scrutiny

The welfare state environment is in the midst of transition, and is changing in ways that have significant implications for the nonprofit and social services sectors. Austerity and welfare retrenchment, increased competition among providers (including with for-profit), and more stringent evaluation and reporting requirements, have affected the opportunities and challenges that service providers face. However, these changes, and their implications, differ across the wide variety of welfare states.

This Panel will address the changes in the welfare state environment and their effects on service providers in comparative perspective, focusing on common trends of austerity and competition while illuminating how different welfare states are dealing with these challenges.

The Political Theory of Peer Review
The Hopes for the ERC by its Founders

The European Research Council (ERC) was established in 2007 with the objectives of encouraging high quality research in Europe through competitive funding, and supporting investigator-driven frontier research across all fields, on the basis of scientific excellence alone. It complements other components of Horizon 2020. This Panel will discuss the following:

How has the ERC delivered on its objectives?

How has it been received by national authorities?

What have been the other effects of the ERC – concerning, for example, inter-European mobility of young researchers, and national research strategies?
The idea of ‘smart cities’ has spread globally, though it encompasses a wide range of applications. At its most basic, a smart city initiative is one that employs information and communication technologies to address urban needs. The European Commission defines smart cities as improving ‘urban life through more sustainable integrated solutions’.

Operationally, smart city solutions have addressed a variety of policy areas, but there is an underlying theme that the use of technology makes possible new forms of governance that are more participatory, open, collaborative, accountable, networked, and efficient.

This Panel will ask:
How do we understand the politics, policy, and governance of the use of technology in cities?
To what extent are these technologies transforming politics and governance?
What are the consequences for local democracy and effective governing?

academic freedom and human rights protection, which belong to the large rubric of democracy.

While the election results in France and the Netherlands reassure us of the majority will to curb rising nationalism, we cannot put our anxiety to rest. The anxiety reflects the global shockwave originating from the Brexit vote and from Donald Trump’s electoral victory.

In this shifting milieu we have been witnessing the visible erosion of democratic norms in various parts of the world. We are thus increasingly concerned about the grave consequences of the precarious political upheavals for academia.

Where are we headed? What can be done? Where to draw the line between academic research and political activism? How to address the controversial topics pertaining to academic freedom, including freedom of speech, and human rights violation, including defamation and the like? How to negotiate between normative ideals and the reality of academic survival?

This Panel aims to address the following questions:
What are the strategies to better protect academic freedom?
How can we contextualise the increasing challenges?
How can we promote solidarity across the global academic community?
What are the diagnoses, as well as prognoses, of increasing challenges?
Boost your skills at the EPCR Methods School

The EPCR’s Winter and Summer Schools in Methods and Techniques offer world-leading training in research methods for political science and neighbouring disciplines.

Good research requires a solid methodology; a belief key to the aims of the EPCR and the reason for the creation of its Methods School. Launched in 2006, the EPCR’s Summer School in Methods and Techniques quickly established itself as a leading event of its kind, paving the way for the first Winter School, in 2011. More than 700 participants from across Europe and beyond have attended the last two Methods School events (the 2016 Summer School and 2017 Winter School). Besides a majority of PhD students, participants include a growing proportion of postdoctoral researchers and tenure-track or more senior scholars.

Holistic training
The School’s philosophy is to offer up-to-date training across the whole range of methodologies, and across different paradigms and approaches. By combining the Winter and Summer School, researchers can follow a diverse training track of introductory and advanced courses, in various formats.

Salient methods
Delivered by experienced Instructors and supported by dedicated Teaching Assistants, the School gives researchers the methodological skills they need at different stages of their career, while a lively plenary programme encompassing free course tasters, poster sessions, and the popular ‘brown bag’ events, complement the academic components. Covering methods particularly salient for research in political science, the School caters to the needs of research at macro and micro levels. Courses cover quantitative and qualitative designs, and positivist and interpretative perspectives.

The Methods School involves intensive courses and lab sessions, which require a strong commitment from participants.

Location, location
Following a three-year residency at the University of Vienna, in 2015 the Winter School moved to the Bamberg Graduate School of Social Sciences in Germany, where it is set to remain until 2020. The Summer School takes place every July/August. Following a hugely successful ten years at the University of Ljubljana, from 2016 the event began a three-year residency at Central European University ( Budapest), an internationally renowned research university with strong methods expertise.

Comparative Politics
Published in Association with Oxford University Press
Founded in 1990, this book series is devoted to the comparative study of contemporary government and politics, with a specific interest in the comparative domestic politics of institutions and political actors. Global in scope, books are characterised by a stress on comparative analysis and strong methodological rigour. The series publishes cutting-edge, in-depth analyses on these topics, and provides a forum for scholars to share their work on themes ranging from democracy, electoral reform, money and politics, parliament and cabinets, representation, political leaders and personalisation, party organisations and intra-party democracy, democratic linkage and public opinion. The series aims to be at the forefront of scientific debates in the field, and titles are nominated for prizes throughout the year.

EPSR is wide-ranging, broad-minded and embraces all key themes and approaches of the discipline, without restriction in methodology or regional focus. The journal encourages scholarship that reaches across fields of substantive interest and methodological commitments. As such, it reflects the richness and diversity of the discipline while seeking creatively to reach beyond its borders.

Publications

Since the ECPR’s establishment in 1970, publishing research in political science and political thought has been one of its key activities, initially through journals for the profession, and subsequently with the launch of seven specialised book series in collaboration with academic publishers. In 2005 the ECPR launched its own imprint, ECPR Press, offering high-quality Monographs from young scholars and republishing out-of-print classics that had made a significant contribution to political studies. Since then, the Press has expanded its scope, publishing Monographs by established scholars which had already appeared in languages other than English; and printing several volumes of general interest to the profession. In 2011 two new series were added: Studies in European Political Science and Essays. ECPR Press now publishes original research from leading political scientists and the best young scholars in the discipline. Its scope extends to all fields of political science, international relations and political thought, without restriction in approach or regional focus. The Press is also open to interdisciplinary work with a predominant political dimension. Publications are refereed by either the members of the Press Editorial Board, or by external readers.

Stagarto, Sfaima, and the Politics of a Classic
"Stagarto, Sfaima, and the Politics of a Classic" is a historical study that explores the political and cultural significance of a classic work in a specific European context. The book examines the interplay between literature, politics, and society, highlighting themes of identity, power, and resistance. It is an essential read for scholars interested in the intersection of literature and politics, particularly in the context of the historical and political dynamics of a specific European region.

ECPR Press celebrates new partnership with Rowman & Littlefield International

Rowman & Littlefield International, based in London, is an innovative and fast-growing academic publisher in the humanities and social sciences. It is affiliated with Rowman & Littlefield, based in Washington DC, which recently marked its 40th anniversary as a leading US independent publisher.

Political science is a key area of focus at RLI’s own publishing, on both sides of the Atlantic. On 1 June 2017 ECPR Press entered into a new partnership with Rowman & Littlefield International. Commenting on the publishing partnership, RLI’s Chief Executive Oliver Gadsby said: ‘We have been struck by the depth of connections and research across the ECPR network, and we look forward to the next stage of development for ECPR Press. We will be working closely with the ECPR Editorial Board and team to support the current programme and expand the publishing, which will continue to be of the highest quality in its authorship and selection of titles. We will bring to bear our editorial, digital, production, sales and marketing teams in London and Washington to ensure that ECPR Press authors reach the widest possible readership around the world.’

Join us in the exhibition area, Eilert Sundts hus, for a reception to celebrate our new partnership Friday 8 September, during afternoon coffee break, 15:40–16:00. Meet the publishers, and enjoy some tea, coffee and cake!

Cities and the European Union: Mechanisms and Modes of Europeanisation

Samuele Dossi

In contrast with the classic view based on EU instruments that have ‘city on the tin’, this volume examines European Union policy instruments affecting the urban domain through the lens of Europeanisation. Instead of looking at EU instruments that are legally consecrated to cities, Dossi uses theoretical public policy analysis to explore the arenas and causal mechanisms that structure the encounter between the EU and urban systems of governance.

From Participation to Deliberation: A Critical Genealogy of Deliberative Democracy

Antonio Floridia

This book reconstructs the theoretical genesis of deliberative democracy, analysing its conceptual core and its relationship with the idea, and practices, of participatory democracy. Its aim is to contribute to an ongoing debate on these two models of democracy that are often spoken about and yet frequently left undefined or, worse, mistaken for each other.

National Identities and Foreign Policy in the European Union: The Russia Policy of Germany, Poland and Finland

Marco Siddi

In his new book, Siddi examines the relationship between national identity and foreign policy discourses on Russia in selected member states of the EU. His analysis focuses on narratives concerning key policy areas in the EU-Russia relationship during the years 2005–2015, such as energy, security and developments in the shared neighbourhood.

In 2004, Barbara Budrich founded her press because she believed in the great value social sciences can have for society. Barbara Budrich Publishers are convinced that most problems faced by societies across the globe can be explained and solved with the knowledge social sciences provide. Demographic change, migration, integration, social and educational inequality – just a few of the vast issues social sciences help to answer. The Budrich book list and journals offer top quality research in social sciences and humanities, specifically in Political Science, International Relations, Gender, Sociology, Social Work, Public Policy, Educational Research and Pedagogy. European Political Science Call for Papers

European Political Science (EPS) is an international journal co-produced by the European Consortium for Political Research and Palgrave-Macmillan. Published four times a year, it presents contributions by, and for, the political science community in five broad strands:

- Research articles
- Articles about learning and teaching
- Datasets
- Debates
- Articles on the profession of political science in Europe and beyond

Aiming to strengthen its professional angle, EPS is soliciting single papers, symposia or special issues on any topic relating to the profession of political science in Europe and the world. We are particularly interested in papers with a comparative focus.

Topics can include but are not limited to:

- The state of the discipline of political science both in research and teaching since World War II—its challenges, developments and problems
- Relations between academia and politicians, policy makers, journalists and ordinary citizens
- Practical topics that cover the academic and non-academic job market, as well as tenure and promotion
- Inclusion and diversity in the discipline of political science
- The increasingly complex world of publishing
- Considerations of data transparency
- Ethical considerations when conducting primary research such as surveys and interviews

Interested authors should submit their manuscript via the journal’s homepage: bit.ly/Palgrave-EPS

All submitted papers undergo double blind peer review. Questions pertaining to this call for papers should be directed to EPS co-editor Daniel Stockemer (dstockem@uottawa.ca)

In this index you will find all participants who had paid to attend the Conference by Wednesday 12 July 2017.

Non-attending co-authors of multiple-authored Papers are also listed, provided the Paper presenter had registered and paid by the cut-off date.
ERIS – European Review of International Studies

ERIS seeks to be a journal to which those who wish to know what is happening in European International Relations can turn. It aims to achieve this goal by offering a review section of monographs published in European languages and review articles of the literature on substantive themes or significant developments in different European academic communities. Its principal objective is to publish original articles and to make time translations of existing major articles not readily available in English.

Gendering European Integration Theory
Engaging New Dialogues

The authors engage a dialogue between European integration theories and gender studies. The contributions illustrate where and how gender scholarship has made creative use of integration theories and thereby contributes to a vivid theoretical debate. The chapters are designed to make gender scholarship more visible to integration theory and, in this way, stimulates the broader theoretical debates. Investigating the whole range of integration theory with a gender lens, the authors illustrate if and how gender scholarship has made or can make creative use of integration theories.

Europeanisation and Renationalisation
Learning from Crises for Innovation and Development

The book explores how the European Union and its members have been reengaging Europeanisation and renationalisation in response to the multiple crises they faced in recent years. The authors highlight varying understandings of crises in different national and supranational policy and institutional contexts. They show how in some cases these have challenged the legitimacy of European Union norms and institutions and even triggered desintegration, while in other cases these have served as sources of inspiration for European neoliberal innovation and political development.
The future belongs to those who prepare for it today. - Malcolm X

We, the International Association for Political Science Students (IAPSS), prepare you for the future.

We are the largest international association of, for, and by students of political science and related disciplines, which executes programs and services worldwide to advance the causes of the discipline. Our goal is to have a global impact on international political science.

Our activities include:
- Annual academic conferences for students and young researchers (World Congress and Convention)
- Study trips, winter, and summer schools in key locations
- Journals (double blind peer-reviewed): POLITIKON and Encuentro Latinoamericano
- Academic Political Science and International Relations blog: A Different View
- Academic Think Tank, Student Research Committees (SRCs), and delegations to international conferences

No matter if you are an undergraduate, a graduate, or a postgraduate student we are looking forward to welcome you as a member of the IAPSS Family. Join us now!
