Political Science and Digitalization – Global Perspectives

Digitalization is not only a new research subject for political science, but a transformative force for the discipline in terms of teaching and learning as well as research methods and publishing. This volume provides the first account of the influence of digitalization on the discipline of political science including contributions from 20 different countries. It presents a regional stocktaking of the challenges and opportunities of digitalization in most world regions.

How Sentiment Matters in International Relations: China and the South China Sea Dispute

The rise of the People's Republic of China represents a major challenge for global politics at large and regional stability in Southeast Asia in specific. This book reveals that growing negative sentiment and disrespect experiences perceived by the Chinese side over time have contributed to Beijing's increasingly bold and proactive stance toward the South China Sea Dispute in recent years.

Europeanisation and Renationalisation Learning from Crises for Innovation and Development

The book explores how the European Union and its members have been renegotiating Europeanisation and renationalisation in response to the multiple crises they faced in recent years. The authors highlight varying understandings of 'crises' in different national and supranational policy and institutional contexts. They show how in some cases these have challenged the legitimacy of European Union norms and institutions and even triggered disintegration, while in other cases these crises have served as sources of inspiration for European social innovation and political development.

New Authoritarianism Challenges to Democracy in the 21st century

The third wave of democratization unlike the first and the second, has not been followed by the reverse wave. However, in several countries democratically elected leaders interpret democracy narrowly, as the rule of majority only. Other conditions for democratic government (such as the rule of law, protecting human rights) are ignored. Such system of government differs from the authoritarian model as defined by Juan J. Linz and can best be called "new authoritarianism". The future of new authoritarianism remains uncertain.

The World of Political Science – The Development of the Discipline Book Series

Edited by Michael Stein
and John Trent

Research Committee 33 of the International Political Science Association (IPSA), dedicated to the Study of the Discipline, prepared a comparative, analytical model of the development of sub-fields of political science. It was then offered to the IPSA research committees to guide them in preparing up-to-date overviews of their field.

- A state-of-the-art survey of current activities;
- A study of conditions in methodology, concepts, training and communication of research;
- A synthetic overview analysis and explanation of developments and trends;
- A critical perspective focusing on present strengths and weaknesses with suggestions for the future.
