Welcome to the Joint Sessions of Workshops

Dear Participants

Welcome to the ECPR's 44th Joint Sessions, and welcome to Pisa! I wish you all an inspiring, productive, and pleasant four days.

The Joint Sessions of Workshops, conceived by Rudolf Wildenmann and first held in 1973 in Mannheim, are often referred to as the 'jewel in the crown' of the ECPR. Its formula of bringing together small groups of senior and junior scholars working on a particular theme, to discuss each other's Papers, has proven most successful. The formula also offers plenty of opportunity to mingle with participants in parallel Workshops. The event's success can be measured by the large number of edited volumes and special journal issues that originate from ECPR Workshops. Success is also reflected in the steadily growing number of applications for Workshops and, once these have been selected, applications to present a Paper.

Here in Pisa, we have 24 Workshops, but there were 112 applications to organise one. And we received more than 750 applications to present a Paper in one of these 24 Workshops; many more than the Workshop Directors could accept.

So I should not only welcome you, but also congratulate you on having leapt the hurdles through this very competitive selection process. Such healthy application figures have prompted the ECPR's Executive Committee to consider ways to increase the number of Workshops in future years, and allow more colleagues to enjoy the benefits of participation, without lowering the quality that results from the competition.

Meeting in Pisa no doubt adds to the attractions of the 2016 Joint Sessions. After all, it is the second time in a decade that we have met here: in 2007 Pisa was the venue for the General Conference. Pisa's rich political history, dating back to the Maritime Republic of the Middle Ages, its monuments and museums, scenery and cuisine, all add to the experience.

Many have contributed to making this event possible. On the Executive Committee, Luca Verzichelli, Kris Deschouwer, and previously Manuel Sánchez de Dios were involved in site visits and the selection of Workshop proposals; behind the scenes, much hard work was done by the ECPR events team. And we are most grateful to the Workshop Directors for their initiative and energy.

But above all, our thanks should go to the local organising team from the Scuola Normale Superiore, the Scuola Superiore Sant'Anna, and the University of Pisa. The team is led by Donatella della Porta, Yves Mény, and Luciano Bardi, three widely known and respected senior scholars with a long history of commitment to the ECPR (Professor Bardi, for example, was ECPR Chair 2009–2012 and Professor Mény from 2000–2003).

It is very special that these three 'ECPR veterans' have taken on this responsibility. Chapeau on behalf of us all!

Dear Participants

Famous for its leaning tower, Pisa has a skyline that is immediately recognisable worldwide – despite its being a small city of around 100,000 inhabitants.

What's less well known is that the city has also a leaning towards academia! Pisa is a university town structured around four main institutions: Centro Nazionale delle Ricerche (CNR), the National Research Centre, whose largest lab facilities are located in town; the University of Pisa, founded by Pope Clement VI in 1343; the Scuola Normale Superiore (SNS) created in 1810 by Napoleon on the model of the French elite Grandes Écoles; and the Scuola Superiore Sant'Anna, a sister institution launched in 1987 along the same lines but with a focus on applied and experimental research. Students at the Schools attend courses at the University, and many labs share facilities, so all the institutions are used to collaborating.

This year's Joint Sessions have been organised as a collaborative venture between three of those academic institutions: a first for the ECPR.

Given the high number of institutions in such a small city, it's no surprise that half the population consists of academics, researchers and students.

Unlike so many university towns, in which academic activities are the primary attraction, Pisa enjoys an extraordinary historical and cultural heritage. Outside of term time, international tourism keeps the city vibrant and lively. The high density of bars, shops, restaurants and pizzerias makes Pisa a great place to visit at any time of the year: the city is a campus and the campuses are the city.

The Festa della Liberazione, a national holiday celebrating Italy's liberation at the end of the Second World War, takes place on Monday 25 April, so you should enjoy a particularly festive atmosphere in Pisa during your stay!

On behalf of all three institutions, we wish participants a fruitful and stimulating few days.

Research and education in an international environment

Sant'Anna School of Advanced Studies is a public university institute, with special autonomy, working in the field of applied sciences: Economics and Management, Law, Political Sciences, Agricultural Sciences and Plant Biotechnology, Medicine, and Industrial and Information Engineering. The School explores innovative paths in research and education. Professors and researchers live and interact with the students, enjoying continuous cultural and intellectual exchange. Many innovative ideas are generated at Sant'Anna which are then developed in collaboration with foreign universities, organisations, companies and research institutes. The School's international nature and reputation for excellence and scientific community has established its standing in Italy and abroad. Sant'Anna is a full member of the European University Association.

University of Pisa

The University's Department of Political Science was officially founded in 2012, but its origins go back much further

The Department is the natural successor to the Faculty of Political Science, which dates back to 1970, and whose origins can be traced back still further, to a degree course within the Faculty of Law.

The community of Political Science studies is a broad one, formed by undergraduates, postgraduates, researchers, and lecturers, as well as the invaluable administrative, secretarial and technical staff. It is a community whose work is based on interdisciplinary study – though individual fields of knowledge are much more closely connected than they may at first appear – and on a versatile, open, modern approach to culture.

The University's teaching and research activities are therefore very much in tune with the complex society in which we live, a society in which professionals are regularly called upon to find solutions to new, though often interconnected, problems and needs.

Scuola Normale Superiore

Founded by a Napoleonic decree in 1810, the SNS is a public institute of higher education with unique features

At SNS, the selection of students is based solely on merit, classes are organised like seminars, teaching and research are closely linked, college life is an integrated part of the experience, and international exchanges are highly encouraged.

The SNS is part of a highly qualified network of universities and research institutions such as the Scuola Superiore Sant'Anna and the National Research Council (CNR). As the leading institution in the Italian academic panorama and one of the best training and research centres in science and humanities in Europe, the SNS is equipped with all the infrastructure and facilities necessary to host experienced researchers and to facilitate research projects of any size. The extensive SNS library is one of the largest open-shelf libraries in Europe.

Newly restored historic staircase in the San Silvestro complex

The Scuola is based in two historical Tuscan cities: in Pisa since its foundation, and in Florence since 2013. SNS offers undergraduate and PhD courses in three faculties: the Faculty of Humanities, the Faculty of Mathematical and Natural Sciences and the Institute of Humanities and Social Sciences (the latter is in Florence and exclusively devoted to doctoral studies with four years fully funded PhD grants).

Historic Palazzo della Carovana on the Piazza dei Cavalieri (Knights' Square)

The city of Pisa

Famous worldwide for its Leaning Tower, this former maritime republic is one of the most charming towns in Italy

Though there's much more to Pisa than its leaning tower, a visit wouldn't be complete without a visit to the Piazza dei Miracoli or 'Square of Miracles', a UNESCO World Heritage site which contains many of Pisa's most famous attractions:

Torre Pendente Construction began on the Leaning Tower in 1173 but subsidence caused it to lean soon afterwards. To climb the Tower, buy an advance ticket for around €17.

Duomo di Pisa Cathedral containing artwork by Giambologna, Della Robbia and others. Romanesque style with double aisles and a cupola, a huge apse mosaic and a late Gothic / early Renaissance pulpit. Free to enter, timed tickets available.

Battistero Romanesque dome; fine view of the Tower from the top. At regular intervals, the ticket-checker shouts out to demonstrate the extraordinary echoing acoustics!

Campo Santo Monumentale Ancient Roman sarcophagi and splendid medieval frescoes.

Museo del Opera del Duomo Sculptures and paintings formerly housed in the Cathedral and cemetery.

Museo delle Sinopie Beautiful fresco sketches.

What to see beyond the Piazza dei Miracoli

Piazza dei Cavalieri Small town square with historic buildings, most belonging to the University or Scuola Normale Superiore (SNS).

Palazzo della Carovana Main SNS building, elaborate renaissance façade.

Museo di San Matteo This fantastic museum houses original artwork from Pisan churches – one of the best places to see Tuscan Renaissance art.

Other historical buildings worth seeking out include the Palazzo dell'Orologio, Chiesa di Santo Stefano, Chiesa di San Rocco, Palazzo Carovana and Palazzo dei Dodici.

Stroll down the river

Riverside streets give Pisa a distinctive character. Take a walk down Lungarno Mediceo and Lungarno Pacinotti on the north side of the river, Lungarno Galilei and Lungarno Gambacorti on the south.

At each end of Ponte di Mezzo stand Piazza Garibaldi and Piazza XX Settembre. From Garibaldi runs Borgo Stretto, with shops, cafés, bars and restaurants that, together with Corso Italia going in the opposite direction from XX Settembre, make for a lively pedestrianised area.

Make the most of your ECPR membership

The ECPR brings people together across the spectrum of political science and related disciplines. It offers unrivalled opportunities to collaborate with scholars who share your research interests, and to explore this constantly changing academic field

The ECPR's conferences and events are a forum for lively and fruitful discussion and idea exchange, while its biannual Methods School – Summer and Winter – invites you to hone your research skills under the tutelage of internationally renowned experts.

Your institution's ECPR membership entitles you to a host of tangible benefits that will advance your studies and help further your career. Set up a MyECPR account, and make the most of them!

Your benefits include:

- Reduced fees for the General Conference and Graduate Student Conferences, Joint Sessions of Workshops and Methods School
- Eligibility for funding to attend ECPR events
- Print copy of EJPR delivered to your Official Representative
- Online access to EPS via Palgrave Macmillan
- 30% discount on all titles in the ECPR/OUP Comparative Politics series and 20% off all OUP politics titles
- Opportunity to direct Workshops at the Joint Sessions (Associate Members can co-direct)
- Opportunities to join a Standing Group or Research Network, or to set up new ones
- Online MyECPR account, where you can register for events, and propose Workshops, Sections, Panels and Papers
- Eligibility to win prizes and awards
- Regular e-bulletins – including job alerts

The European Consortium for Political Research

The ECPR is an independent, scholarly association that supports and encourages the training, research and cross-national co-operation of political scientists through Europe and the world

Membership

ECPR membership is institutional and currently comprises nearly 350 universities concerned with the teaching and research of political science. Membership is paid by the university, but it is the individuals within it who receive the benefit; from Master's and PhD students, through to the most senior professor.

ECPR events

General Conference

Since 2001, our General Conference has been held every other year in a different European city. It became an annual event in 2014. The academic programme features a number of Sections on a common theme, resulting in more than 400 Panels.

This event brings together scholars from all sub-disciplines of political science, creating a forum for rich discussion. The Conference also offers roundtables, a plenary lecture and a lively social programme.

Joint Sessions of Workshops

Recognised as one of the highlights of the world's political science calendar, our annual spring Joint Sessions have been hosted in different European cities since 1973.

Each Workshop, which lasts for about five days, gathers 15 to 20 participants from different institutions for substantive discussion.

Participants should be carrying out research in the field of the Workshop, so that they can present a Paper for discussion, and discuss the other Papers presented. Some Workshops lead to the publication of multi-authored books, and to the creation of Standing Groups.

Methods School

ECPR believes that good research requires solid methodology. Our biannual Methods School offers training across all methodologies, and caters to the needs of macro- and micro-level research. The courses, which can be followed on their own or combined over one or more events, cover quantitative and qualitative designs as well as positivist and interpretative perspectives.

The Winter School in Methods and Techniques takes place around February each year; the Summer School runs July–August. Combining the Summer and Winter Schools, you can follow training tracks to create a bespoke training package.

Graduate Student Conference

This event is an excellent opportunity for young scholars to share their work with peers in a supportive, stimulating environment. Students can take an active role in any capacity, or they can simply attend and observe.

A lively plenary programme includes roundtables on timely topics and professional issues facing students, lectures from high-profile academics, and social activities to grow the networks essential to a thriving career.

Research Sessions

The Research Sessions are a chance for small, pre-established, groups to meet in a supported environment during the quieter summer months.

Whether it's an initial gathering to get a project off the ground, or a meeting further down the line to prepare a publishing proposal, groups are given the time and facilities they need to focus and move their project forward. Only groups from member institutions may apply, and priority is given to applicants from existing Standing Groups.

Publications

Journals and book series

ECPR co-publishes three leading journals: European Political Science, European Journal of Political Research, and European Political Science Review. It also publishes the high-profile book series, Comparative Politics with Oxford University Press.

ECPR Press

In 2005, the ECPR launched its own imprint: ECPR Press.

The Press publishes high-quality Monographs and collections of Essays, along with a small selection of out-of-print Classics that have made a significant contribution to political studies scholarship.

The imprint also includes a highly respected series of multi-authored, edited volumes, Studies in European Political Science, many of which have developed from Workshops and Panels at ECPR events.

Standing Groups and Research Networks

These are groups of researchers, in many cases formed at ECPR events, with a shared scholarly interest.

Some Standing Groups are small, maintaining only a website and mailing list; some organise major conferences and summer schools, and produce their own publications.

There are currently more than 50 Standing Groups, covering many sub-fields of the discipline. All are eligible to apply for grants to help with the Group's organisation, and with the running of summer schools.

Research Networks are more specialised. They have fewer members, are more limited in their range of activities, and/or are of a temporary nature, for example to test the viability of a group before applying for Standing Group status.

Prizes

In recognition of the contributions made to all areas of political science, the ECPR awards six prizes each year. These cover a wide spectrum of achievement, from the Jean Blondel PhD Prize for the most outstanding thesis at an ECPR institution, to the Lifetime Achievement Award.

Jean Blondel PhD Prize

Jovana Mihajlović Trbovc University of Ljubljana and Peace Institute Ljubljana

Public Narratives of the Past in the Framework of Transitional Justice Processes: The Case of Bosnia and Herzegovina

Since 2003, the ECPR has awarded an annual prize for the best PhD thesis in politics, encompassing International Relations, Political Theory, and Public Administration. The prize fund is €1,000 and the winner is offered the opportunity to adapt their thesis for publication as an ECPR Press Monograph.

The Blondel Prize jury, which was unanimous in its choice of winner, was last year chaired by Birgit Sauer (University of Vienna, also representing the ECPR). The jury also comprised Petra Meier (University of Antwerp), Christoph Scherrer (University of Kassel) and Birte Siim (University of Aalborg).

For her prizewinning thesis, Jovana Mihajlović Trbovc examines the processes of transitional justice in Bosnia and Herzegovina. The thesis challenges assumptions about transitional justice by studying the prosecution of war crime perpetrators in the 1992 – 1995 war.

Challenging assumptions that once the ‘truth’ about these crimes is publicly presented, it becomes part of the common public memory of the country, her dissertation shows that memory-making became a new battleground between the three dominant ethno-national elite groups in Bosnia and Herzegovina, and hence, that memory-making was not a process of transitional justice.

The work incorporates a number of innovations: it introduces the concept of ‘transitional justice’ into political science, and critically assesses it. In doing so, it bridges nicely the fields of legal and political science; and by selecting important case studies to analyse collective memory-making, it contributes to a political science concept of collective memory.

Mihajlović Trbovc enhances studies about transitional justice by taking a nuanced qualitative approach; the thesis analyses meaning production of ethnic elite groups in the processes of transitional justice, and shows how ethnicity became an important factor in the peace process.

A significant research effort, the thesis undermines such assumptions as ‘truth’ being easily detected in processes of transition, but shows also how truth is part of ongoing hegemonic struggles, paving the way for further research.

The jury agreed that the work was soundly constructed, and its qualitative research skilfully executed.

Rudolf Wildenmann Prize

Carina Schmitt
University of Bremen

The Legacy of Colonialism: The Origins of Social Security in Developing Countries

This prize is awarded annually to the best Paper presented at the previous year's Joint Sessions. Candidates must have gained their PhD within the previous five years. Carina Schmitt, who presented this Paper at the 2015 Joint Sessions in Warsaw, was awarded the prize from a field of ten excellent candidates.

The jury, chaired by Luca Verzichelli (Università degli Studi di Siena), also comprised Birgit Sauer (University of Vienna), Reuven Hazan (Hebrew University of Jerusalem), Kris Deschouwer (Vrije Universiteit Brussel) and Yannis Papadopoulos (University of Lausanne).

Carina Schmitt's Paper explores the evolution of social security in the largely neglected area of developing countries, analysing the long-term impact of colonialism on social security systems in about 70 former British and French colonies.

Using event history analysis, the Paper is rigorously researched, and original in approach. Schmitt's findings, clearly presented with robust empirical evidence, support her central hypothesis that social security systems in former colonies have been highly influenced by colonial relationships.

The jury felt this Paper was an excellent example of longitudinal research based on quantitative analyses. They judged that it makes a stimulating contribution to the development of comparative policy analysis, in a relevant policy domain, and in a truly global perspective.

*Heading for Collision?
Economic and Social Europe in Search of Reconciliation*

Writing in the 1960s and early 1970s, Stein Rokkan remained quite sceptical about the prospects for European integration. In his view, the EEC was essentially a form of cooperation between administrative and corporate agencies, and could not create effective cross-system structures nor a 'genuine community of trust' among the peoples of Europe.

To a large extent, Rokkan's scepticism proved wrong. The EU has gone a long way towards redesigning (weakening, differentiating, in some cases dismantling) systemic boundaries, not only in the economic but also in the social sphere. It has also acquired a number of significant 'statist' features: a supranational bureaucracy, an independent judiciary, common (quasi) representative and executive institutions.

But the genuine community of trust has not come about. The crisis has in fact dissipated a significant share of that 'communal' capital which had been laboriously accumulated since the 1990s, especially within the so-called eurozone.

Two new and foreboding lines of conflict have emerged, both rooted in the tension between the economic and social dimensions of integration: a North-South conflict, pitting the creditor countries of the EMU core against the debtors of the Southern periphery; and an East-West conflict, pitting high-wage, high-welfare Member states against their low-wage, low-welfare counterparts in Central and Eastern Europe.

Will the EU be up to the daunting task of managing such conflicts and contain their disgregative implications? Is it possible to reconcile Economic Europe and Social Europe, thus creating the potential for genuine community building?

This Lecture proposes a post-Rokkanian diagnosis of the current EU predicament and will try to identify some possible ways out, as well as their political and institutional preconditions.

Maurizio Ferrera is a professor of political science at the University of Milan and President of the Network for the Advancement of Social and Political Sciences (NASP) among eight northern Italian universities.

He has been Visiting Professor at the EUI, UC Berkeley, McGill and the LSE, and between 2003 and 2009 he served as a Member of the Executive Committee of the ECPR.

His research concentrates on comparative welfare states (with a specific focus on southern Europe), and on European integration, and in many of his works, he has re-elaborated the 'Rokkan-Hirschman model' to investigate the impact of integration on national systems of social protection.

In 2014 he received an ERC advanced grant for a broad research project on 'Reconciling Economic and Social Europe: the role of ideas, values and politics' (www.resceu.eu).

His main book in English is The Boundaries of Welfare: The New Spatial Politics of Social Protection (OUP, 2005). In Italian, he has recently published Rotta di Collisione: euro contro welfare? (Laterza, 2016).

Maurizio Ferrera's latest journal articles include Solidarity in Europe after the Crisis (Constellations, 21/2, 2014) and Ideology, Parties and Social Politics (West European Politics, 37/2, 2014).

Travelling around Pisa

Pisa is a small, compact city, and all tourist attractions, restaurants, hotels etc are within easy walking distance of each other.

To order a taxi, call the switchboard on 050 54 16 00.

Lunches

On-site lunches are available only for participants who pre-ordered them.

None of the other Universities' canteens/mensas will be open during the Joint Sessions period, but you'll find plenty of cafés close by.

Water

For reasons of sustainability, the three institutions hosting the Joint Sessions have banned the sale of single-use plastic bottles of water on site.

Please bring your own bottle and refill it from one of the water fountains around the campuses.

Hot drinks

You'll find vending machines for tea and coffee on site, and plenty of nearby bars and cafés selling coffee from €1.

Wi-fi

Usernames and / or passwords to access each institution's wi-fi will be issued when you register. Please be aware that you will need a different connection for each University building. You can connect to the municipal wi-fi free of charge; again, you will receive usernames and / or passwords on registration. Connectivity may be poor in some areas of the city.

National holiday

Monday 25 April is a national holiday in Italy (Liberation Day). Banks and post offices will be closed. Some restaurants, museums, shops and attractions could also be closed or operate shorter opening hours.

Shopping

Most shops are open Monday to Saturday, 8:30 – 13:30 and 15:30 – 19:30, and closed on Sundays.

Using your mobile phone

If you do not turn off your roaming or 3G connection, charges can mount up, depending on whether you have a package that includes Italy.

Decision-Making Under Ambiguity and Time Constraints: Assessing the Multiple-Streams Framework

Reimut Zohlnhöfer
Friedrich Rüb (Eds)

Academic interest in the Multiple-Streams Framework has skyrocketed recently as the conditions under which policy making takes place increasingly resemble the conditions the framework takes as a starting point. This volume is the first attempt to assess the potential of such scholarship, bringing together international scholars to discuss the strengths and weaknesses of the framework, theoretically and empirically.

Global Tax Governance: What is Wrong with It, and How to Fix It

Peter Dietsch
Thomas Rixen (Eds)

High-profile scandals and increasing public debt following the financial crisis have put international taxation high on the political agenda. This book offers a rare combination of empirical analysis with normative and institutional proposals for global tax governance. Contributions by experts from the fields of political science, philosophy, law, and economics offer a comprehensive diagnosis of the problem of tax competition, and consider potential solutions.

A Responsive Technocracy? EU Politicisation and the Consumer Policies of the European Commission

Christian Rauh

This book challenges the image of the European Commission as an insulated technocracy immune to political pressures. It shows how European integration has become increasingly politicised, so that the Commission now cares much more about the public appeal of its policies. Based on first-hand insider accounts, a comparative analysis of 17 policy-formulation processes indicates that the Commission's policy choices do indeed become more consumer friendly under higher levels of public awareness.

*Citizens in Europe:
Essays on Democracy,
Constitutionalism and European Integration*

Claus Offe
Ulrich K. Preuß

Interdisciplinary essays by a constitutionalist and a political sociologist examining how fragmented societies can be held together by constitutional arrangements providing for bonds of democratic citizenship. The authors address moral and institutional prerequisites on which the deepening of European integration depends. The desirability of such deepening is now contested, with some states' membership, and EU treaty compliance, at stake.

Mixed Rules, Mixed Strategies: Candidates and Parties in Germany's Electoral System

Philip Manow

Electoral rules that secure fair representation, stable majorities, and make parties responsive to citizens: do they exist? While no electoral system can maximise all dimensions, many hold that systems mixing proportional and majoritarian rules come closest. But the influence of electoral rules extends to coalition formation, party organisation, parliamentary behaviour, and more. All this necessitates a new, in-depth analysis of the prototypical mixed system: the German one. This book provides that analysis.

Visions of Judicial Review: A Comparative Examination of Courts and Policy in Democracies

Benjamin Bricker

Judicial review is increasingly prevalent in democratic government. Yet, with unelected judges reviewing – and potentially overturning – the work of the people's representatives, it also has long been, in Oliver Wendell Holmes' words, 'the gravest and most delicate' task that courts undertake. This book considers and tests the potential value of judicial review in modern democracy, grouping answers into three main arguments: legalist; rights-protecting; and majoritarian.
