about the ecpr

The European Consortium for Political Research (ECPR) is an independent, scholarly association, established in 1970. It supports and encourages the training, research and cross-national co-operation of political scientists throughout Europe and beyond. The ECPR currently has approximately 325 European institutional members and associate members in over 40 countries, from as far afield as New Zealand and Japan. These members together form a network of thousands of individual political scientists, international relations and European studies specialists.

Activities include:

- Organising workshops, roundtables, conferences and summer schools
- Publishing journals, books, articles and newsletters
- Providing a comprehensive information source for political scientists through its web site, electronic bulletins and online searchable databases

about the academic convenors

Eileen Connolly

School of Law & Government, Dublin City University
Eileen.Connolly@dcu.ie

Eileen Connolly is lecturer in politics at Dublin City University, where she was a founding Board member of the university's Centre for International Studies. She is a member of the Irish National Committee for the Study of International affairs and a member of the editorial board of Irish Studies in International Affairs.

Her research interests include gender and the politics of development. She is currently leading an international research project for the Advisory Board of Irish Aid (the Irish Dept of Foreign Affairs official development agency) examining the role of southern civil society organisations in development and poverty alleviation, based on field research in Tanzania, Ethiopia and Central America.

Joaquim Molins

Facultat de Ciències Polítiques i de Sociologia, Universitat Autònoma de Barcelona
joaquim.molins@uab.es

Joaquim Molins is full professor at the Autonomus University of Barcelona since 1989, and prior to that at the University of Barcelona (1982-1989). He has served as Director of Department and Dean of the Faculty of Political Science at UAB, and as Director of the PhD program, with quality distinction from the Spanish Ministry of Education.

His research interests include elections, political parties, interest groups and industrial relations. He has published articles in journals such as West European Politics and the British Journal of Industrial Relations. Between 2002 and 2005 he worked with the Spanish Evaluation Agency on evaluation tasks.

Jennifer Sands

School of Politics and International Studies, University of Leeds
j.m.sands@leeds.ac.uk

Jennifer Sands is currently a PhD candidate and part-time lecturer in European politics at the School of Politics and International Studies, University of Leeds (UK). Having initially trained and worked in the field of English law, she obtained a Masters degree in European Politics in 2001 and is now close to completing a PhD titled 'Organised Crime and the State in Spain'. On the topic of Organised Crime in Spain, she has published articles and spoken at several international academic conferences, and she has been involved in an ESRC funded project on European Security. She has been a member of the ECPR's Graduate Network Coordinating Committee since 2004.

welcome

from the academic convenors

Dear visitors,

It is a pleasure for our Department to host the second ECPR graduate conference at our campus in Bellaterra.

Our University will be 40 years old at that time and the Faculty of Political Science 20 years old, so we have two celebrations to share with all you.

Spanish political science has developed strongly since the Franco Dictatorship and this conference is an opportunity for our graduate students to discuss with other colleagues from all across Europe on a wide range of topics. In addition, there will be two roundtables, on Regionalism, and publications and career development.

The social program of the Conference will provide opportunities to enjoy the campus environment and meet fellow graduate students.

It is also a good opportunity to visit Barcelona (30 minutes by train) and discover why it is one of the most exciting cities in Europe.

Joaquim M. Molins, Professor of Political Science (UAB)

ecpr

The recently established ECPR Graduate Network is an international association that sits under the umbrella of the ECPR and aims to facilitate postgraduate academic and research activity and networking. It provides a framework for interaction and joint initiatives, and a forum for the exchange of ideas and experiences between junior researchers in the field of politics and the social sciences. It provides a range of services and activities which are outlined below.

Membership of the Graduate Network is on an individual basis and any graduate student, PhD candidate or post-doctoral researcher enrolled at an ECPR member institution is eligible to join the Network – so far, over 380 members have registered. Members of the Network benefit from the use of an online, searchable database, which allows them to contact and be contacted by colleagues with related interests. Members also receive a regular electronic newsletter which provides information about Graduate Network activities, conferences, summer schools, calls for papers, and so on. The Graduate Network has its own dedicated web pages containing detailed information about Network activities and events, available at: www.essex.ac.uk/ecpr/graduates/index.asp. Network information and correspondence is also channelled through a Graduate Official Representative based in each ECPR member institution (nominated by that institution).

Other activities include a regular newsletter, graduate development panels and social events at ECPR conferences, promotion of the PhD prize and the ECPR Monographs series, which publishes outstanding PhD theses, and of course the Graduate Conference. We welcome your input and suggestions for ways in which we can expand and develop the Graduate Network.

The Co-ordinating Committee

In June 2004, a co-ordinating committee was established to oversee and direct the activities of the Graduate Network. Currently, the committee consists of seven members, who are individually or jointly responsible for a particular portfolio of activity. Details of the portfolios held by the different committee members, as well as information about the current committee, are available on the Graduate Network website: www.essex.ac.uk/ecpr/graduates/committee.

All current committee members will be formally standing down from the committee at this conference and the results of the elections for the new committee members will be announced shortly.

Since its inception, the Graduate Network Co-ordinating Committee has: worked to develop the activities of the Network; established a constitution for the Network; officially launched the Graduate Network at the ECPR General Conference in Budapest in 2005; played a major role in the first ECPR Graduate Conference at Essex in 2006; and sponsored panels on development issues at the ECPR General Conference in Pisa last year.

how to be a superdelegate!

UIA, The Union of International Associations in Brussels, Belgium, has produced guidelines on how to behave as the perfect attendee at international conferences.

At an international meeting, you are not only representing yourself, or even your own organisation, but your country as well. You should endeavour to do so with appropriate dignity. The only way of participating in an international congress is to do so whole heartedly and intelligently. It is the behaviour and active participation of the congress-goers which, above all, ensures the success of a congress.

1. ADAPT

You are attending a congress in order to work and communicate. You should be prepared to undergo a real change in outlook to adapt yourself to the different ways of thinking of other types of civilisation. Also to understand the particular mechanisms of these meetings, their procedures, equipment and organisation. Try to get to know others better and respect them more. Try to understand as well as make yourself understood.

- Don't be the type of participant who cannot adapt.
- Think about what you hope for from the meeting.
- Remember that its duration is limited to a few days.

2. PARTICIPATE

- Remember that the other participants expect you to contribute something.
- Familiarise yourself with the rules of the congress, but with a view to respecting them, not to causing difficulties.
- Do not stay in an ivory tower, but do not take part in discussions just for the pleasure of hearing your own voice or having your name written down in the minutes.
- Make sure your behaviour helps the Chairman and others guide the proceedings to concrete conclusions, in an atmosphere of cooperation and friendship.

"Prepare for a real change in outlook"

3. CIRCULATE

- Make contact with people you already know, but also make a point of meeting as many unfamiliar faces as possible.
- Bring business cards with you.
- Mark on your participants' list the names of those you wish to meet.
- Take advantage of meals, receptions and excursions; change to another group, an unfamiliar table, a different coach.
- Always wear a badge giving your name, nationality and perhaps the languages you speak.

4. INTEGRATE

Discretion is all very well, but timidity is useless and annoying. Remember that others are in the same position as you, and many may be even more isolated. Introduce yourself to other people and make as many introductions as possible between other participants.

- Arrive punctually at meetings.
- Avoid annoying other participants by continual comings and goings, or by private conversations during sessions.
- If there are several sessions taking place at the same time, choose one, and stay there from start to finish.
- Respect the working procedure and the decisions of the organising committee, including those relating to the working languages of the congress.
- Listen carefully, bearing in mind the aims of the congress, the views of the speaker, and your own; make notes while listening.
- During the congress make notes as to how you propose to follow it up, putting down ideas, preparing your report, taking addresses.

Follow these simple guidelines and you'll be an efficient and satisfied delegate!

"It is the behaviour and active participation of the congress-goers which, above all, ensures the success of a congress."

how to be a superchair!

Experienced panel chair and member of the ECPR's Graduate Network, Rainbow Murray gives her advice on how to get the most out of chairing a panel at the Graduate Conference.

- There is no need to introduce yourself or anyone else at length, unless they are a special invited guest from outside academia. At most, say people's names and institutional affiliations. Let them introduce their papers themselves.
- Try to start the panel on time wherever possible.
- Let the paper-givers speak in the order of the programme unless they request a different order for e.g. technical reasons.
- Keep each paper-giver to time. This is the most important part of the role of chair. You should allow the final third of the session for questions and divide the remaining time evenly between the number of panellists. If one person goes over, they are directly eating out of the time of the other panellists, and that isn't fair. Give people a subtle warning when they are close to time (a raised eyebrow may suffice, otherwise passing them a piece of paper saying "2 minutes" in large letters will do the trick). Pass them another note saying "please conclude" or similar once they are out of time. If they don't stop, you will need to be bold and ask them out loud to wrap up. Even if they are much more senior than you, it is your professional obligation as well as theirs to keep to time, and people will respect you more for being strict than being weak.
- Once all papers have been given, take questions from the audience. If there are lots of questions, try to avoid asking any yourself, but try to think of some just in case the audience take a while to warm up (or go silent very quickly).
- If any of the audience goes off on a lengthy tangent, you may need to interrupt them to refocus the discussion.
- Make sure the session finishes on time. People want their cup of coffee/ toilet break etc and they can always continue the debate over coffee if they care that much.
- Always end the session by inviting the audience to thank the presenters (i.e. round of applause)

OTHER INFORMATION

Rubbish containers are located in various places on campus. We request that you use them properly, and where recycling is available, please do so accordingly.

The apartments do not have air conditioning (apart from Type Q), so please do not adjust the thermostats as this will affect the heating only.

To receive hot water, you should press a switch marked red, which is located in the kitchen.

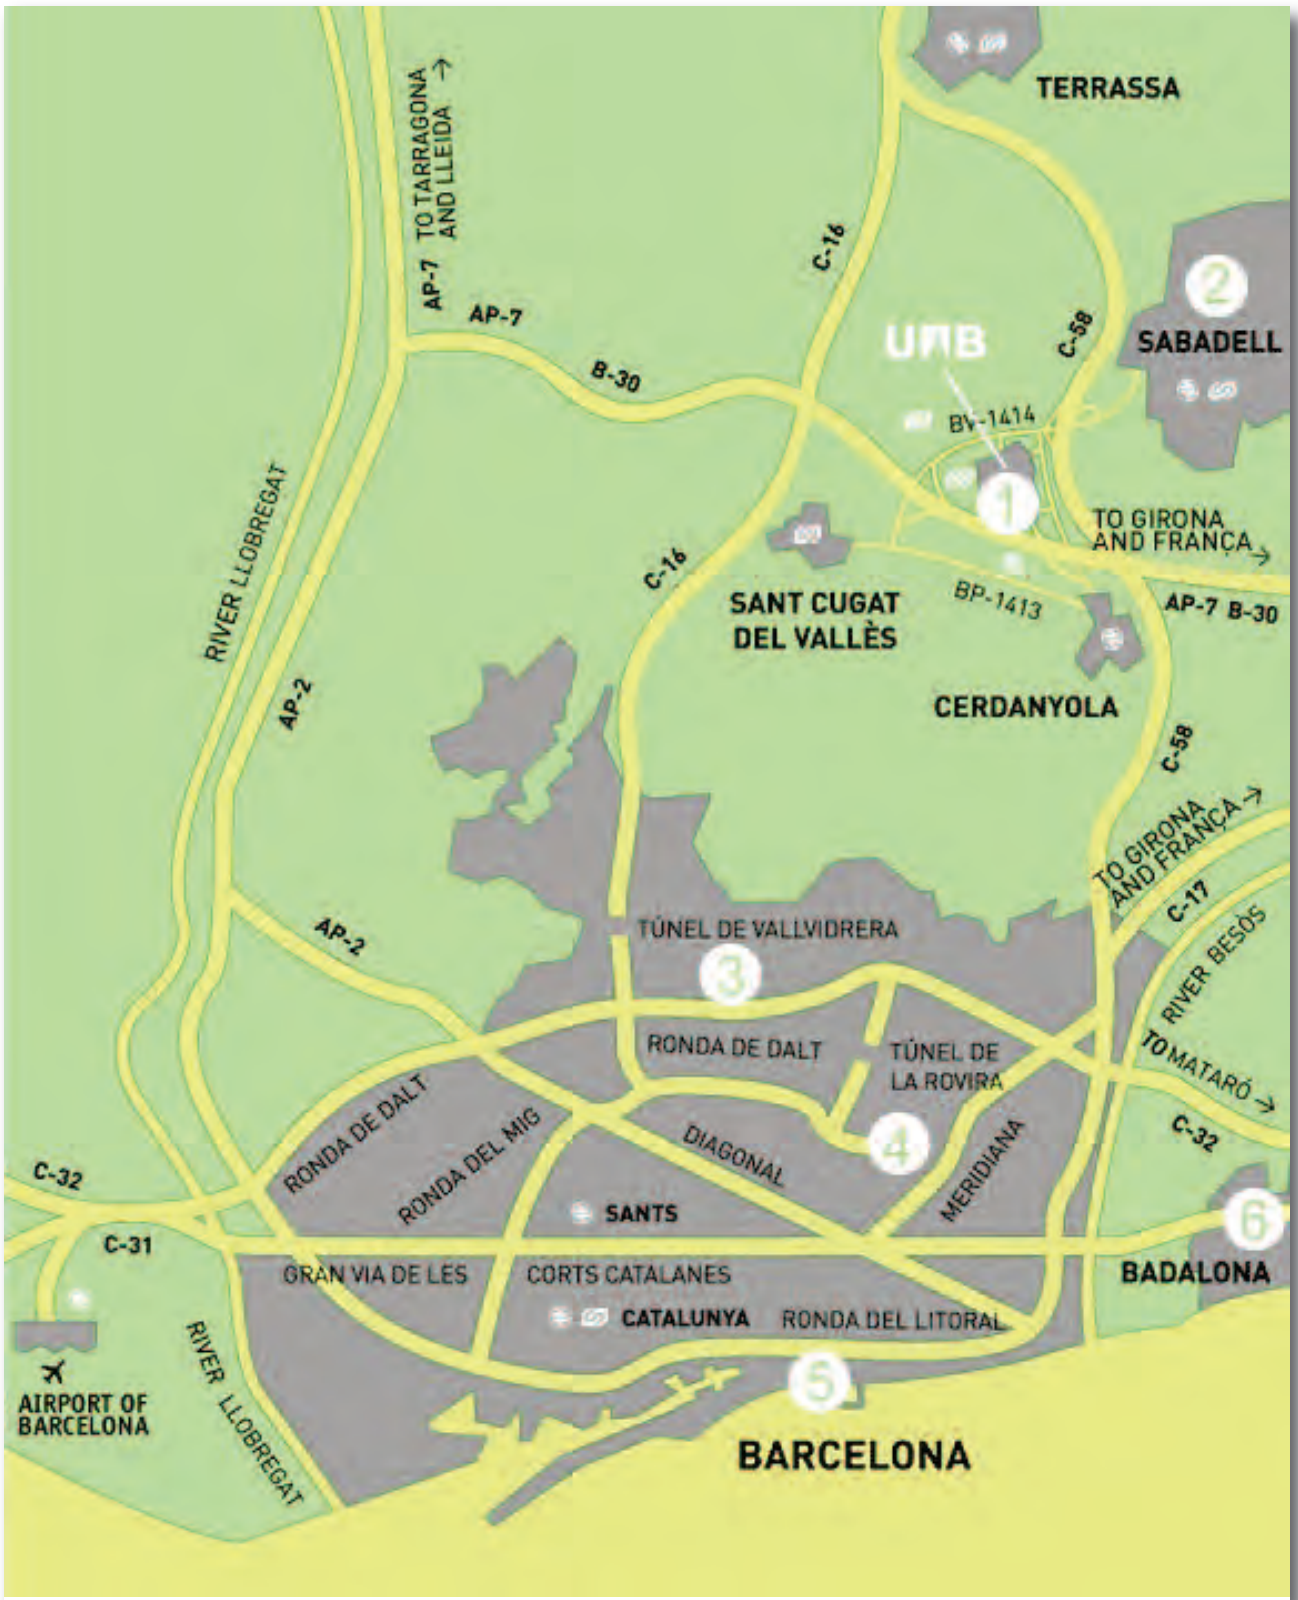

The ovens in the kitchen should be cleaned using lukewarm water and non abrasive detergents only.

Vila Universitaria requests that noise is kept to a minimum between the hours of 0000 and 0800.

If you require additional nights accommodation, please inform the staff at Vila Universitaria as the keycode to enter the apartments will be deactivated at 1200 on the day of departure.

plenary lectures

Fred Halliday

'the mediterranean in an age of globalisation'

Monday 17.30 - Arnau de Vilanova

Born in Dublin, Fred Halliday studied at Queen's College, Oxford and the School of Oriental and African Studies, London. He is Professor of International Relations at the London School of Economics and currently ICREA Research Professor at the Institut Barcelona d'Estudis Internacionals. A specialist on Middle Eastern affairs, with particular reference to Iran, Halliday speaks Arabic and Persian. He is an editorial associate of the Middle East Research and Information Project (MERIP), and a regular on ABC, BBC and CBC radio and TV broadcasts. TNI Fellow from 1975 until 2000, Halliday serves as an advisor on Middle Eastern, Central Asian and Eastern European matters.

Giorgio Freddi

'health care as the central civic and political problem of the us: a comparative perspective'

Tuesday 17.30 - Arnau de Vilanova

After graduating at the Law School of Bologna (1955), and working as a teaching assistant there, Giorgio Freddi spent 1959-62 at the University of California at Berkeley where he was awarded his PhD in political science. In 1968 he returned to the University of Bologna where he was advanced to a full professorship in 1970. His published research is concerned with institutional functioning, decision making, and public policy. He has worked on several different empirical referents: the comparative study of public bureaucracies, the Italian judicial system, special district governments, the comparative analysis of health care policies, and the politics and policies of environmental protection. In 1987 he moved his chair to the second Facolta di Scienze Politiche, in the satellite campus of Forli. Freddi is also the editor of the Rivista Italiana di Politiche Pubbliche, which he founded in 2001.

where will you publish your thesis?

Publishing is a vital part of a successful academic career, and where better to start than with your PhD thesis?

As a newly qualified political scientist your first port of call should be the ECPR's own book series – ECPR Monographs.

The ECPR Monographs series publishes major new research in all sub-disciplines of political science and includes work from both senior and younger members of the profession. As such the editors welcome outstanding PhD theses to be published alongside key new works by more established and senior academics.

Series co-editor Vincent Hoffmann-Martinot will be on the ECPR's book stand during the coffee break on Wednesday morning to speak to prospective authors. He will also be talking about the Monographs series and the ECPR Press itself during the Roundtable on Publications and Career Development.

More information can also be found on the ECPR web site (www.ecprnet.org) or by contacting Rebecca Knappett at the ECPR (rknapp@essex.ac.uk).
